This form of italics is not written on an inclination as the basis of most American calligraphy systems, but vertical based on European calligraphy systems to help with students who can fight and are left-handed. After teaching it, I discovered that the students had a greater success in connecting the letters without an inclination. Previously the first year of teaching, I had my students who worked on calligraphy every morning for the morning work because let's admit it, they needed it. Once passed a letter, they were able to move on to the next. They generally exceeded 3 letters at a time. To motivate them, I "let them" move on to the Corsivo once they have passed the press. 3 pages of the super small characters are included because it is because no?!-the perfect size to put small circular stickers to keep track of progress !!  Miniatures can generate strange, but the Gradi 3for 3For 1-12, 10 verses of memory for the character.
